INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SCIENCE JOURNAL

Vol. XXXVII, 1985
Nos. 103–106

SUBJECT AND AUTHOR INDEX

Subjects

Adolescence in western societies, contradictions and paradoxes 441–454
Adolescents and politics in France 531–540 Agribusiness emergence of biotechnology or end of 285–299 transnational firms and agriculture of developing countries, Mexican case 331–343
Agro-industrial system in the USSR, problems of developing 361–370
Argentina, road to democracy, comparisons with Chile and Uruguay 31–46
Asian case-study, centre and periphery in knowledge distribution 109–118
Bulgaria, attitudes of youth to work 507–518
Biotechnology, end of agribusiness or emergence of 285–299
Caribbean peasantry, in the confines of plantation mode of production 401–414
Central America, youth, a solution to the crisis 519–529
Chile, comparisons with Argentina and Uruguay, on democracy 31–46
Comparative politics and regional studies, example of the Middle East and North Africa 75–84 research and systems theory 5–18
Comparisons
Argentina with Chile and Uruguay, on the road to democracy 31–46
Validation in the social sciences by 19–29
Cultural development in ethnic groups, anthropological explorations in education 201–216
Education
anthropological explorations in ethnic groups 201–216 economics of 217–235
national economy of Nigeria, and, 237–246 political economy of 157–173 sociology of, a model of paradigm development, 175–186 Educational planning 247–258
research, problems 149–156
sciences in France 137–147 system, sociology of, society's requirements and career-choice attitudes of young people 187–200 Electoral politics and macro-economic performance in industrial democracies 63–74
Europe, youth, work and employment 475–489
Food production in Western Europe and small farmers 345–360 production systems in the middle valley of the Senegal River 389–400 systems and society in India 371–388 technology, modern, industrializing nature 301–314 transnational companies and their global strategies 315–330 France

adolescents and politics in 541–548 educational sciences in 137–147 young people of immigrant stock in 531–540
Grotius and United Nations 119–127
India, food systems and society in, origins of an interdisciplinary research 371–388
Industrial democracies, macroeconomic performance and electoral politics 63–74
International comparisons, validation in the social sciences by 19–29
Knowledge distribution, centre and periphery, Asian case-study 109–118
Macro-economic performance and electoral politics in industrial democracies 63–74
Mexican agriculture, do transnational agribusiness firms encourage? 331–343
Middle East and North Africa, regional studies and comparative politics in 75–84
Military in politics 97–107
National pride, cross-national perspective 85–96
Nigeria, education and national economy in 237–246
North Africa, and Middle East, regional studies and comparative politics in 75–84
Plantation mode of production, Caribbean peasantry in the confines of 401–414
Political economy of education 157–173
Senegal River, food production systems in middle valley of 389–400
Social science output worldwide, relevance 259–275
Social science research trends in the USSR 549–554
Social security crisis in richest countries, analogies 47–61
Sociology of education, a global model of paradigm development in 175–186 of educational system, society's requirements and career-choice attitudes of young people 187–200
Sweden, youth participation and work 491–506
Systems theory, basis for comparative research 5–18
Technology, modern food, industrializing nature 301–314 Transnational agribusiness firms and agriculture of developing countries, Mexican case 331–343 food companies, their global strategies 315–330
United Nations, and Grotius 119–127
Uruguay, comparisons with Argentina and Chile, on democracy 31–46
USA, youth research in 455–473
USSR
problems of developing agro-industrial systems 361–370 social science research trends in 549–554
Western Europe, small farmers and food production in 345–360
Western societies, contradictions and paradoxes of adolescence 441–454
Young immigrants in France, new forms of expression 531–540
Youth attitudes to work, Bulgarian case 507–518
new way of life in 1980s 427–440 participation and work in Sweden 491–506

solution to the crisis in Central America 519–529 theoretical trends in research, in USA 455–473 work and employment in Europe 475–489

Authors

ALTBACH, Philip G. Centre and periphery in knowledge distribution: an Asian case-study 109–118
ARIENZA, Marisa, and MALLMANN, Carlos A. Argentina on the road to democracy: comparisons with Chile and Uruguay 31–46
ALIOU BA, Thierno, and CROUSSE, Bernard. Food production systems in the middle valley of the Senegal River 389–400
BAETHGE, Martin. Individualization as hope and disaster: contradictions and paradoxes of adolescence in Western societies 441–454 BECKFORD, George L. Caribbean peasantry in the confines of the plantation mode of production 401–414
BENITEZ, Manaut, Raúl. Youth: a solution to the crisis in Central America 519–529
BRITTAIN, J. Michael. Relevance of social science output worldwide 259–275
CARNOY, Martin. The political economy of education 157–173
CROUSSE, Bernard, and ALIOU BA, Thierno. Food production systems in the middle valley of the Senegal River 389–400
DEUTSCH, Karl W. The systems theory approach as a basis for comparative research 5–18
DOGAN, Mattei. The social security crisis in the richest countries: basic analogies 47–61
ENAOHWO, J. O. Education and the national economy of Nigeria 237–246
GAPOTCHKA, Marlen P. Some social science research trends in the USSR forty years after the Second World War 549–554
GELPI, Ettore. Problems of educational research 149–156
GROOTINGS, Peter. Youth, work and employment in Europe 475–489
HAMILTON, Peter. Small farmers and food production in Western Europe 345–360
HARTMANN, Jürgen. New forms of youth participation and work in Sweden 491–506
HIBBS, Douglas A., Jr. Macroeconomic performance, policy and electoral politics in industrial democracies 63–74
HIGGINS, Rosalyn. Grotius and the United Nations 119–127
KIURANOV, Chavdar. Attitudes of youth to work: the Bulgarian case 507–518
LAZAR, Judith. Adolescents and politics in France 541–548
LE THANH Khôi. The economics of education 217–235
LEOPOLD, Marion. The transnational food companies and their global strategies 315–330
LISLE, Edmond A. Validation in the social sciences by international comparison 19–29
LOURIE, Sylvain. Educational planning 247–258
MALLMANN, Carlos A., and ARIENZA, Marisa. Argentina on the road to democracy: comparisons with Chile and Uruguay 31–46
MAHLER, Fred. A global model of paradigm development in sociology of education 175–186

MARTYNOV, V. A. The problems of developing the agro-industrial system in the USSR 361–370

MAZOUZ, Mohammed. New forms of expression among young people of immigrant stock in France 531–540

MIALARET, Gaston. The educational sciences in France 137–147

OZBUDUN, Ergun. Regional studies and comparative politics: the example of the Middle East and North Africa 75–84

PEARL, Arthur. Theoretical trends in youth research in the USA 455–473

RAMA, Ruth. Do transnational agribusiness firms encourage the agriculture of developing countries? The Mexican experience 331–343

ROBERTS, Kenneth. Youth in the 1980s: a new way of life 427–440

ROSE, Richard. National pride in cross-national perspective 85–96

SHUBKIN, Vladimir. Sociology of the educational system: society's requirements and the career-choice attitudes of young people 187–200

SORJ, Bernardo, and WILKINSON, John. Modern food technology: industrializing nature 301–314

SPITZ, Pierre. Food systems and society in India: the origins of an interdisciplinary research 371–388

VARESE, Stefano. Cultural development in ethnic groups: anthropological explorations in education 201–216

VERGOPOULOS, Kostas. The end of agribusiness or the emergence of biotechnology 285–299

WIATR, Jerzy J. The military in politics: realities and stereotypes 97–107

WILKINSON, John, and SORJ, Bernardo. Modern food technology: industrializing nature 301–314